Sistemas informativos en América Latina (Spanish Edition) Alfredo García Luarte

Sistemas Informativos en América Latina es un libro que recoge la situación del periodismo y los medios de comunicación en ocho países de la región: Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Brasil, México, Argentina, Venezuela y Perú. De una manera clara y precisa se intenta abordar las condiciones en que se desarrolla la profesión, sus problemas y desafíos, con el objetivo de identificar aquellos patrones comunes que permitan elaborar procesos que tiendan a superar las limitaciones de la actividad periodística y del funcionamiento de los medios.

La forma de gobierno que adopte una nación y las políticas que en materia informativa se establezcan, serán elementos principales pero no los únicos que determinarán la composición y el funcionamiento de un sistema informativo. El acceso a los medios, los controles y regulaciones específicas, así como las condiciones para ejercer la profesión periodística, son preguntas que espera responder este libro, de manera que el lector no especializado pueda identificarlas con claridad.
